Washington State Convention Center

Seattle, WA

In 1982, with support from the state Legislature, a public non-profit corporation was established to build and operate the Washington State Convention & Trade Center in Seattle, Washington. Construction began in the fall of 1985, and continued for nearly three years. The Center's first scheduled event took place on June 18, 1988.

Because of an increasing demand for heavy-load exhibition space, an expansion project began in the early 1990's. This expansion effectively doubled the available event space, enabling the Center to retain existing customers and attract new business. Onpoint Designs was commissioned to design the infrastructure and audio systems for the additional meeting, conference, and training rooms.
